The table shows how much people from five employment sectors earned, in three different salary levels in 2009.

Introduction: the table compares the salary of workers in five areas - finance, transportation, construction, manufacturing, and lastly hospitality - in three varying categories in 2009.

Overview: 1st key feature - finance the highest pay
2nd key feature - Maximum - hospitality the lowest
3rd key feature - Minimum - construction the lowest
4th key feature - Average - hospitality the lowest.

Employment Sector	Maximum	Minimum	Average
Finance	£8850	£1600	£5225
Transportation	£4580	£843	£2712
Construction	£3100	£790	£1945
Manufacturing	£3500	£930	£2215
Hospitality	£2900	£890	£1895

Overall, those who were employed in finance received the highest pay across all categories in 2009. In contrast, the amount of salary given to workers in the hospitality sector was the lowest in both maximum and average ranges, whereas builders received the lowest salary in the minimum range.

Main body 1: Maximum.

Focusing on figures in the maximum range, the amount of salary given to finance workers topped the list, accounting for £8850. Those employed in transportation services received almost half of that (£4580), while manufacturing workers were given £3500, placing the salaries of workers in these two sectors in the second and third positions respectively. The salary of contruction workers ranked fourth with £3100, with the figure for hospitality at the end of the spectrum at £2900.

Main body 2: Average

As for the average numbers, the highest salary was again given to finance workers at £5225. The amount of salary received by transportation employees ranked second (£2712), with the figures for manufacturing in third (£2215) and construction in fourth (£1945). As mentioned previously, the lowest salary was observed in the hospitality sector in this range too (£1895).

Main body 3: minimum

With regards to the minimum levels of salary, the top place was again responsible for the finance workers (£1600). Followed in ranking order were manufacturing (£930), hospitality(£890), and transportation (£843). However, at the bottom of the list was the salary of builders in this category, accounting for £790.

257 words